Plans For Development Mission Bay Area Would Enhance Value All Beach Property

The large audience at the social-civic forum Tuesday evening in the Ocean Beach school auditorium had an opportunity to hear and enter discussion of a subject of great importance to the beach communities, as well as to San Diego county—Mission Bay state park and its proposed development.

State Senator Ed Fletcher, who was the principle speaker, outlined the history of the Mission Bay area, beginning in 1856 when one of the first surveys was made by engineer Hayes. No development followed this survey, but in 1872 the U. S. government became alarmed at the rapid filling in of San Diego bay and had the channel of the river diverted into Mission Bay.

Again Mission bay was apparently forgotten until a few years ago. The park area was deeded to the state by the city. Since being under the control of the state park commission numerous obstacles have prevented its development. Because the commission was unable to get the support of the city council or the state harbor commission as sponsors, WPA projects were out of the question.

Another situation which has brought about a deadlock in its improvement is the litigation in which the south shore area is now involved. Due to discrepancies in various surveys which have failed to establish the mean high tide line, about 400 individuals claim title to certain portions already deeded to the state. After clearing up several legal entanglements the state now has a suit set for trial in January which claims for the state all property shown according to the Hayes survey.

Even if it were not for this impediment the park's future is uncertain because the state park commission, which is already responsible for the upkeep of some 70 parks, does not now have sufficient funds for the improvement and the state's program of strict economy will be in order for some time to come.

Councilman Al Bennett, arriving at the meeting later in the evening, explained a proposal for development which had been discusst at council meeting that afternoon. He suggested that the city accept the south portion of the park area back from the state, which proposal Sen. Ed. Fletcher thought would be agreeable to the park commission under certain conditions. This plan would call for the dredging of bay channels and consequent filling in of the tidelands of the south shore, which would answer flood control purposes and at the same time provide about 1500 acres for recreational and commercial facilities.

Concerning the commercial uses to which such filled in lands east of the causeway might be put, Councilman Bennett said that several aircraft manufacturing companies, including the Boeing, had expresst a desire to come here, but at least the Boeing would have to have access to water for landing purposes. This plan would provide almost 1000 acres for such plants and would be in direct line with the aviation development about San Diego bay. The harbor commission, which has been so successful in its development of Lindbergh field, would be in charge of the improvement and would sponsor federal projects for neccessary dredging operations.

While this proposal was new to most of the audience, they expresst general approval of it, but Sen. Fletcher said he would like to see a much larger and even more representative group meet and discuss the question before his return to Sacramento.

John R. Lyons is chairman of the forums and the next meeting will be Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium when discussion will ensue regarding the selection of a candidate for the city council from the first district.

Born, November 20, to Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Bryant, 2178 Abbott street, a daughter at Mercy hospital.

S. D. County Population Near 300,000

San Diego county will have a population of 297,000 on January 1, 1937, according to an estimate of the population of California counties just completed by California Taxpayers' association. Population of the county on January 1, 1936, was 279,620 the association estimated.

According to the Federal Census, San Diego county's -population was 209,659 on April 1, 1930, so that the Taxpayers' association's estimate shows an inrease of about 87,340 by January 1, 1937.

The total population of California, the association estimated, will be 6,790,000 on January 1, 1937, an increase of approximately 1,113,000 over the census population of 5,677,251 as of April 1, 1930.

Changes in population come from two general sources, the association stated. The first is the excess or shortage of births over deaths; the second, the increase or decrease caused by migration. The present estimates are supported by actual school enrollment figures for 1936 and current school enrollments reported by California school administrators. They also reflect the increasing immigration into the state which has been in evidence since the census.

Lots Selling Readily To Home Builders

F. R. Sessions, hustling realtor of Newport avenue, reports the sale of three parcels of vacant lots last week to prospective home builders. They are as follows:

Sale of lot 9, block 89, Point Loma heights, on Santa Monica avenue near Guizot street, to A. J. Jones, C.P.O. in the navy, who plans a $3,500 residence.

Sale of lots 27-28, block 13, Ocean Beach park, on Voltaire street near Ebers, to E. J. Haas, who recently sold his grocery and market and now plans the building of a bungalow court.

Sale of lots 43-44, block 25, Ocean Beach sub-division on Santa Monica avenue near Ebers street, to Mrs. Ruth I. Berndt, who plans construction of a $2,500 home.

Closing Out Sale at O. B. Hardware

Wednesday, December 2nd, the Ocean Beach Hardware & Paint Co., 1921 Bacon street, started the first day's business on a closing out sale, and everything in the store will be sold, according to E. E. Follin, proprietor.

Mr. Follin will discontinue business entirely, though expects to remain in Ocean Beach for the present, where he has purchased his own home, and, it is said, he and Mrs. Follin have no idea of leaving Southern California. Mr. and Mrs. Follin have experienced the rigors of winter and discomforts of summer heat in the east and have no particular desire to have this impression renewed.

While plans for the future are presumably somewhat indefinite, the Follins will no doubt take advantage of the time for fishing and other recreation.

H. K. RANKIN JOINS KIWANIANS ROUND TABLE

H. K. Rankin, superintendent of Ocean Beach post office, was guest of Milt Lancaster, Wednesday's chairman at Kiwanis luncheon. Jake Watson presided.

The subject under discussion was the varying effects of the social security act, its requirements so far as they have at present been given and the many intricasies of this legislation. Most everyone took part in the round table of questions and answers but it seemed the general opinion there was much more enlightment to come on the problem.

The club went on record as favoring a victory dinner for football players of Point Loma high school. The affair will be the evening of Dec. 15 and the club will entertain more than twenty boys from the local high school squad, the coach and princpal.

Visitors present from La Jolla were Willard Penry, Dr. Lasalle and George Foote.

Five Cottages For Cable St.

A very noticeable improvement was started Monday this week at corner Cable street and Saratoga avenue, when construction was commenced on five frame-stucco cottages, four to face Cable St., and one Saratoga, to cost about $2,000 each. The owner, J. C. Callumbe, will also build five garages on the same property for the accommodation of his tenants.

Form Topic Tuesday Concerns Council Choice

The 1937 spring election should prove an interesting campaign for there are three city councilmen and three city school board members to be replaced or re-elected.

The councilmen whose terms expire are Albert W. Bennett, Walter Wurfel and Harry Warburton. The first district, which Bennett has endeavored to represent, should have a councilman from Ocean Beach vicinity.

The school board members whose terms expire are Jacob Weinberger, Fred Thompson and Ray Reynolds. Mr. Reynolds is from the district which comprises Ocean Beach and has been an ardent supporter of our schools, assisting materially in the improvement projects which we have received. He possibly will be reelected for a man of proven ability is better than an unkonwn quantity.

The office of city attorney also will have a man elected to fill this important position.

Nomination blanks will be avilable for candidates Jan. 2, and the last day for filing them with the city clerk is Feb. 20. The last day to be registered for the March 23 primary is Feb. 11 and for the April 27 general election is March 18.

The Ideal Modern Market, formerly Killebrew's on Voltaire street, on Monday was taken over by a new partnership. The ownership we reported last week would go to Wm. McMakin, jr., however, it is now said Mr. Mc Makin is one of three partners to take over the business. The other two are W. T. Howell and Forrest Pendergast. Mr. Howell is well known in the beach section having been a manager fof Safeway stores at Mission Beach for four years. He was the first president of the Business and Booster club of Mission Beach when that organization was formed two or three years ago. Mr. Pendergast has been at the Loma Food Store at Loma Portal for some time and has seven years experience in the grocery line.

P. M. Burrows this week received permit for the building of a frame-stucco residence and garage at 2851 Denver street, for himself, which will cost $3,000 or better.

1937 Eastern Star Officials Installed at Beautiful Service

HAZEL V. LATHROP
WORTHY MATRON

CLARENCE W. FLETCHER
WORTHY PATRON

A beautiful and impressive ceremony attended the installation of Point Loma chapter O.E.S. No. 490, Saturday evening at Ocean Beach school, when Hazel V. Lathrop, as worthy matron and Clarence W. Fletcher, as worthy patron, were installed with their 1937 officers.

The many members and guests were seated about three sides of the auditorium facing the palm-bankt stage. The gold and ivory theme was carried out by an artistic arrangement of chrysanthemums. Before the stage tall candelabra held lited tapers representing the five points of the Star. Beyond this focal point was a semicircle to which the officers-elect were later escorted.

The evening gowns formed a lovely pageant of color. The metallic cloths brocades contrasted with the briter printed satins, velvets and jewel-colored crepes. Innumerable corsages offered thrilling combinatons in color and form. Continuing this year's color scheme, the women of the officers-elect had chosen white lace gowns and carried flowers of ivory and gold tied with gold ribbon. The coral and silver gowns and corsages of the outgoing officers signified the color motif of the past year.

After distinguisht visitors, matrons and patrons and past matrons and past patrons of Point Loma chapter had been introduced and escorted to seats of honor, the officers-elect were presented. They were addresst by the worthy matron, and oath of office was administered by the worthy patron. Two little pages, Carol Ann Keaton and Donnie Bull, were bearers of the jewels of office, for the incoming worthy matron and worthy patron. As each officer was invested with the badge of office she was conducted to her station, symbolic in the order.

The newly installed worthy matron and worthy patron gave their addresses of greetings and thanks. They introduced worthy matrons and worthy patrons elect of other chapters. Following brief greetings from the distinguisht visitors, Tom M[illegible]son, on behalf of the chapter, presented the junior matron and junior [illegible]atron with the traditional jeweled [illegible]ts. They were then favored with gifts from the 1936 officers presented by Ruth Berndt, and Betty Van Cott. The new worthy matron received a gold and ivory gavel of her office from her worthy patron.

At the closing candlelite service the outgoing officers, filing slowly by their lited candles, snufft out the flame of service in this year's capacity.

Incidental music for the rites was provided by Mrs. Lilliam Hartvigsen, soprano, and the trumpet trio of the Bonham Bros. boys' band.

The installing officers were Gladys Nelson, worthy matron, and Nels Berge, worthy patron, assisted by Helen Parks, chaplain; Rhoda Rickenberg, organist; Lillian Hartvigsen, soloist; Edgar Hastings; Lloyd Ellis Griffin, sponsor of the Star Point association. Trade Leaders Ask That Work Relief Be Ended

THAT work relief as administered by the federal government be gradually discontinued is the recommendation of the board of United States Chamber of Commerce. The board adopted a report of a committee headed by John W. O'Leary of Chicago which held that the work relief "proves in operation to fall far short of its purposes and to create new problems."

J. W. O'Leary

"The committee," said the report, "does not propose sudden and instantaneous stoppage. Those gradual steps should be taken which are always essential when adjustments have to be made upon a considerable scale.

"There is at present danger that, ceasing to have work for unemployed persons as its function, this activity will undertake to replace some of the functions of private enterprise in advancing recovery. There can be no substitute for private enterprise in the development of improved economic conditions."

These five general conclusions from its study were set forth by the committee:

Experience has demonstrated the difficulty of attempting to obtain accurate figures on unemployment through census methods.

Estimates of unemployment on national basis are necessarily inaccurate and lend themselves to exaggeration.

Projects of work relief should not be allowed to take the place in any degree of established agencies for performance of government functions.

Projects of work relief should not be permitted to compete in any degree with private enterprise for workers, skilled or unskilled, and should be so conducted as to encourage workers to seek private employment.

It is evident that further advance in business activities will require the services in private enterprise of persons now on work relief at public expense.

Divided Court Upholds Work Insurance Law

NEW YORK'S state's unemployment insurance law was upheld by an equally divided United States Supreme court, Justice Harlan Fiske Stone being absent on account of illness and taking no part in consideration of the case. There was no formal opinion and no announcement of the lineup of the court.

In the opinion of legal experts the court's action has wide implications affecting not only state employment insurance and other social legislation, but also the administration's social security program.

C. I. O. Unions to Remain Suspended by A. F. of L.

BY A vote of 21,679 to 2,043 the convention of the American Federation of Labor approved the action of the executive council in suspending the ten union that are with John L. Lewis in his Committee for Industrial Organization movement. However the convention accepted the advice of President Green and voted to renew the council's offer to talk peace with the rebel unions and to give the council power to call a special federation convention and expel the rebels if peace negotiations fail.

Labor Wants More Money for La Follette Inquiry

WHILE it was figuring what to do in the matter of the suspended C. I. O. unions, the American Federation of Labor in convention at Tampa dealt with a number of other topics. Among these was the adoption of a report of the committee on legislation demanding of congress additional appropriations for the special senatorial sub-committee investigating violations of civil liberties. This group, headed by La Follette of Wisconsin, has confined its investigations almost wholly to activities of employers in combating unions or in protecting their plants against mob violence during strikes. A large part of the testimony taken has concerned agencies which furnish professional strikebreakers or which sell arms and tear gas to industrial corporations.

The report said: "Millions of dollars will be available to defeat the La Follette investigation. If our reports are as accurate as we believe them to be, then the greatest and most adroit lobby that has ever operated in Washington is being organized to kill this astounding expose of the raising, financing and directing of private armies."

Officials of detective agencies that supply guards for industrial plants assert the real purpose of the La Follette investigation is to make conditions easier for John L. Lewis' committee on industrial organization to promote unionization of steel, coal, and textile workers according to the industrial union plan. They said Lewis delivered several million votes to Franklin D. Roosevelt last November 3 and is in a position to seek a pay off.

In Washington, John J. Abt, counsel for the La Follette subcommittee, announced the dispatch of questionnaires to 700 detective agencies in all parts of the country.

J. E. Davies Appointed Ambassador to Russia

JOSEPH E. DAVIES, wealthy lawyer of Washington, has served the Democratic party in various ways for many years and has contributed liberally to its campaign funds, and now he has been rewarded. President Roosevelt has appointed him American ambassador to Soviet Russia, to succeed William C. Bullitt, who was transferred to the Paris embassy.

J. E. Davies

Mr. Davies, whose wife is the former Mrs. Marjorie Post Hutton, heiress of the big Post cereal fortune, is a native of Wisconsin and practiced law in that state until 1913, when he went to Washington. He was chairman of the federal trade commission under President Wilson in 1915-'16, and was taken along by Wilson as an economic adviser to the Versailles conference. Before that he had served as western manager of Wilson's campaign and as secretary of the Democratic national committee and he was offered in 1918 the ambassadorship to Russia, to Italy and the governorship of the Philippines. He declined, however, so he could run for the United States senate from Wisconsin. He was defeated. He was active during the recent campaign, serving on the advisory committee at Democratic headquarters in New York.

President Roosevelt signed the Davies commission before he left on his South American cruise, but the announcement was withheld until word was received from the soviet government that Davies was persona grata at Moscow.

Spanish Rebels Recognized by Italy and Germany

MUSSOLINI and Hitler threw Europe into spasms of alarm by suddenly calling into session the ministerial councils of Italy and causing them to recognize formally the Fascist government of Gen. Francisco Franco as the legal government of war-torn Spain. It was taken for granted that Austria and Hungary would follow suit. Maj. Ramon Franco, brother of the Spanish insurgent chieftain, had been in Rome and probably informed Il Duce that the general, whose attacks on Madrid were meeting with unexpected resistance, might lose the war unless he were given active support by the nations that sympathized with his cause. Mussolini and Hitler did not immediately announce that they would quit the international agreement for intervention in Spain.

Gen. Franco

Great Britain and Russia were stunned by the action of the two dictators and cabinet meetings were hurriedly called. The British are determined not to be drawn into the Communist-Fascist conflict but they believe that Italy and Germany, especially the former, have designs in the Mediterranean that would peril Britain's seaway to the Orient and are preparing to meet any such threat. Russia's reaction was awaited breathlessly, and the soviet government was being provoked still further by the fact that General Franco declared a blockade of the port of Barcelona, capital of the almost independent province of Catalonia. This move certainly was made to stop the landing of munitions and food from Russia destined for the Spanish loyalist forces. England, France and other nations were greatly concerned over the blockade, for the port is largely used by their shipping. The Spanish rebels have created a strongly fortified port at Palma on the island of Mallorca that can be used as a base for bombardment of Barcelona from the sea.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the house of commons that British ships on the high seas would be protected against interference by either side in the Spanish war.

According to the loyalist government, submarines, "either Italian or German," attacked Spanish government warships at the entrance to the Cartagena harbor and torpedoed the cruiser Miguel de Cervantes.

President Warns Business to Aid Employment

SAILING from Charleston aboard the cruiser Indianapolis for Buenos Aires and the Pan-American peace conference, President Roosevelt directed the release of a statement in which he announced that the government will continue to spend money on a work relief program until July 1, 1938 at least. It is estimated that congress will be asked to appropriate as much as $1,500,000,000 for relief in the next session.

Although he professed himself gratified at the inroads upon unemployment by industry, the President commented upon the fact that private business has not yet absorbed vast masses of the unemployed and that millions of persons remain on the Works Progress administration pay roll and other governmental agencies.

Mr. Roosevelt declared it was "widely known" that many of the largest industries will not hire workers over forty years of age. To a large extent, he charged, this policy is responsible for the relatively large number of older workers on relief. And industry must expand opportunities for the hiring of unskilled workers, he said.

The mayors of the United States, in annual conference in Washington, were gratified by assurances from both Harold Ickes, head of the PWA, and Harry Hopkins, head of the WPA, that the administration will not cease its spending efforts to keep alive the emergency organizations intended to deal with the unemployment problem.

Rex Tugwell Resigns to Join Molasses Concern

REXFORD GUY TUGWELL, known as the No. 1 braintruster, has resigned from his posts as undersecretary of agriculture and resettlement administrator and accepted the executive vice presidency of the American Molasses company, of which another braintruster, Charles W. Taussig, is president, and a third, A. A. Berle, Jr., is a director. In accepting the resignation the President wrote to Mr. Tugwell: "Later on I fully expect to ask you to come back to render additional service." Mr. Tugwell will serve on a special committee of 38 just appointed by the President to study the farm tenancy problem. The new resettlement administrator is W. W. Alexander, who has been first assistant.

R. G. Tugwell

John G. Winant, who resigned as head of the social security board to take part in the Presidential election campaign, has resumed that position at the urgent request of Mr. Roosevelt and is directing the big task of enrolling the future old age pensioners.

Germany and Japan Unite to Combat Communism

COMPLICATING the already complex European situation and directly threatening war is the alleged fact that Germany and Japan have united to fight the spread of communism, and that their pact is expected to be adhered to by Italy and perhaps various central European nations. This is of course directed mainly against soviet Russia, and Moscow is actively aware of the menace. It is understood that the agreement provides that Germany and Japan shall keep strong military forces in East Prussia and Manchukuo respectively; that the two nations shall exchange military information and orders, and that in certain contingencies Germany shall supply Japan with war materials.

Russia sent word to Tokio that it would not co-operate further in granting Japanese fishing concessions until the reported Japanese-German military pact was canceled.

An immediate source of friction between Russia and Germany was the conviction at Novosibirsk of E. Strickling, German engineer, on charges of sabotage and plotting against the soviet regime. He and eight other defendants were sentenced to death and were said to have confessed their guilt. The German ambassador to Moscow asked that Strickling's execution be postponed until the embassy had time to study the evidence and file formal protest.

Two More Unions Join the Maritime Strike

EDWARD F. McGRADY, assistant secretary of labor, was still trying to bring about a settlement of the great strike of maritime workers, but didn't seem to be getting along very well. Indeed, the situation was made worse by nationwide strike calls to the Masters, Mates and Pilots association and the Marine Engineers union. Federal operation of emergency ships to Alaska and Hawaii was discussed but not decided.

Fur Borders Flourish in the Mode

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FOR stirring first page news in regard to important style trends, look to the borderlines of fashion—which is by way of calling attention to the spectacular role border treatments are playing throughout costume design this season.

Not only are sumptuous fur borders flourishing in the mode, but designers are performing all sorts of tricks with borderings and bindings of silks, velvets cut on bias, laces, ribbons, braids, embroidered bandings and glittering novelties of various sorts.

To get some idea of the glamor and glory of the situation let fancy run to this—a youthful and enchanting quaint full-skirted frock of black taffeta the hemline of which is bordered with wide Roman-striped ribbon in flamboyant red, yellow, blue and green. Somewhere or the bodice a bit of this bizarre bordering plays up to the gaiety of the skirt hemline, and the effect is all that you might suppose and then some.

However, it is not that just evening costumes are doing the honors with borders, for the demure street gown has subscribed to the border idea with an enthusiasm that knows no bounds. It is ultra chic for the very new and smart circular - cut daytime dresses of sheer black wool, or of the now-so-much-talked-of suede cloth, duvetyn or broadcloth to be outlined with a banding formed of braid or tiny grosgrain ribbon in the gay and lively Tyrolean colors or coronation reds, purples and blues.

So completely has the idea of borders and bindings captured the fancy of designers, they do not stop at mere hemline borderings, for not infrequently they allow applied bands or inserts of lace, ribbon or what-not to run around and around the skirt and the bodice, one row spaced above another. Indeed this use of unique and versatile border, band and binding treatments is well worth watching, for fashion's spotlight is cast direct upon them.

As to the smart fur borders that are giving high distinction to autumn and winter fashions they are staging just one thrill after another.

The three modes pictured typify newest gestures in border treatments. Handsome gray wolf collars and borders the coat of black novelty-weave woolens shown to the left. This brings up the importance of gray fur trimmings on black. The hue and cry for gray furs gains momentum as the season advances.

A fashion which is taking well is the fur-bordered tunic coat. To the right in the picture you see an interesting version of the general favorite.

The coat centered in the group is new among the newest. In the first place it is all gray and throughout the world of fashion the praises of gray are being sung. In this instance the material is a stunning gray basket wool weave with a wide bordering of gray caracul up-and-down the front. This method of bordering with fur is the "last word."

BLACK WITH JEWELS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Black with a splash of high color is the call - supreme in fashion's realm for this fall and winter. The right kind of an all-black gown, coat ensemble or suit with the right kind of colorful costume jewelry works out the idea to a nicety as the picture herewith assures. Solid black high-lighted by bracelets and finger ring of crystal and rhinestones, creates the dramatic costume here shown. Circular plaques of prystal studded with simulated sapphire cabochons, and joined with rhinestone links, form two of the bracelets. The third bracelet consists of two one-and-a-half-inch wide plaques each going half way round the arm, joined by crystal and rhinestone links. The cabochon back and front is set with a myriad of rhinestones. The ring is a rectangular sapphire stone set in prystal. The modish high crowned hat is of black matelasse jersey.

VIONNET CHANGES SILHOUETTE STYLES

Henna brown and burnt orange are the two new shades stressed by Vionnet in her new winter collection. These soft autumn shades are well adapted to tweed sports clothes and are shown in two and three piece tailored suits, simple woolen street dresses and even in afternoon clothes combined with brown or black.

The Vionnet silhouette has been slightly changed in that skirts are fuller and a bit longer—coming to well below the mid-calf line. Broadened and padded sleeves are used throughout to emphasize the shoulder line and many of the sleeves are fashioned loose and open at the wrist.

Street and afternoon dresses are made with severely high necks in front which are often caught down with clips of brilliants.

Combine Wool and Fur in Smartest New Costumes

Wool and fur are combined to provide some of the most striking costumes for fall days in town, on the campus and even in the country. The luxurious ones, of course, star silver fox, sable and mink and are destined to be worn only by the chosen few. Equally smart but less expensive types make use of semi-precious and casual furs. These include suave woolen dresses with fur jackets or coats that are warm enough for now. The dresses can go under heavier coats when the weather gets colder and back under the little fur jackets in early spring. Kidskin is the favorite right now.

Buttons Go Sporty

Inspired by the eleventh Olympiad, American manufacturers of buttons are turning out a variety of sports designs. There are tiny binoculars, tops in two tones, chessmen, boxing gloves (only an inch and a quarter long, but complete in detail), and baseball mits.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Cane-bottomed chair seats can be tightened up by washing them in a weak solution of salt water and then drying in the open air.

Radiators and steam pipes will be less noticeable in a room if they are painted the same color of the walls or wood trim.

Potatoes used in salad should be thoroughly chilled and with sharp knife cut into half-inch dice. Add rest of ingredients and mix with fork. This will aid in preventing salad from becoming "mushy."

Parsley for potatoes and salads will keep bright and fresh in color if scalded before mincing.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE DANGER SIGNAL

THERE was a great deal of uneasiness in the big barn where the Robber Rats lived. Would Billy Mink return, or had he just made a chance visit and gone somewhere else? The gray old leader of the rats felt sure that Billy would return. He was too anxious to eat, and, you know, when a rat's appetite fails he must be very much disturbed indeed.

But the younger rats thought the gray old leader needlessly frightened, and they went about their business of stealing food and gnawing holes wherever there seemed a chance of finding a new food supply, just as if nothing had happened. However, each hole which led into the barn was continually watched by sharp eyes. Those rats did not intend to be taken by surprise a second time.

Rats prefer the hours of darkness. They hate the light of day. Perhaps that is because their deeds are deeds of darkness. So, when daylight came most of the rats returned to their beds to sleep. Only underneath the barn where it was dark did any of them continue to run about seeking what mischief they might get into.

But the wise, gray old leader saw to it that a watch was kept on each hole just the same as during the night. He didn't think Billy Mink would come in the day time, but he was wise enough to know that Billy Mink is forever doing the unexpected. He suspected that Billy would take great pains not to let the farmer who owned that barn know that he was anywhere about. "He'll probably sleep all day," thought the gray old leader, "but just as soon as it begins to get dark he'll be back here. I just feel it in my bones."

But it wasn't dark when there suddenly sounded the danger signal from one of the watchers. In fact, it was broad daylight, the very middle of the day. You see, daylight and darkness are all one to Billy Mink. He sleeps whenever he feels sleepy regardless of whether it be night or day. At all other times he is very wide awake indeed. It happened that Billy had wakened just about noon that day and as is usual with him after a nap he was hungry.

If he had been a rat instead of a mink he might have remained under the woodpile until darkness came. But Billy is very sure of his ability to take care of himself. He first made sure that no one was about. Then he slipped out from under that pile of wood, and a minute later he was under the barn. Then it was that the danger signal was sounded by the rat who was watching the hole through which Billy entered. It was at once passed on from rat to rat until every one in the barn knew that their enemy had returned.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

FOOD FOR THE GROWING CHILD

IT is gratifying to learn that the growing child may eat almost everything that the older members of the family eat, if the food is simple, well-prepared and nutritious. For a simple dessert that the whole family may eat with impunity, try baked or steamed custards. Prepare them by using two eggs to a pint of milk, a pinch of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, or honey and if all the teeth are good for grinding, add a tablespoonful of freshly-grated coconut for the top of each custard. Sprinkle with cinnamon or nutmeg and chill before serving. To cook, set the custard cups in a pan of water—not too deep to boil up and into the cups—and cook until just firm enough to be like heavy cream. Test with a knife in the center of each; if it comes out clean the custard is ready to remove from the heat. Take out of the water and place in cold water to chill.

We are allowed to give even the small child who has his grinding teeth fresh shredded cabbage as well as grated carrot. Bananas when well ripened are just as important as bread and carrots in the diet.

Cabbage with spaghetti is a different way of serving that good vegetable. To four cupfuls of shredded cabbage take one and one-half cupfuls of broken spaghetti, cook in boiling salted water until tender, then drain. Stir over the fire four tablespoonfuls of butter or any sweet fat, add four tablespoonfuls of flour, blend well and add two cupfuls of milk; cook until smooth, season with salt to taste, adding a few dashes of cayenne and a cupful of snappy grated cheese. Arrange the cabbage and spaghetti in layers, covering with the sauce. Top with soft buttered crumbs and take twenty to thirty minutes. Serve from the baking dish with a wreath of parsley around the dish.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis

© Public Ledger, Inc.

ABILITY to recognize and read the hand by type is but the first stage through which the expert palmist proceeds in assembling the details which become a final picture of the inner personality. The second step is the individual analyses of thumb and fingers, each of which holds amazing secrets to be revealed.

The Thumb.

Through these lessons you are laying a splendid groundwork for what is to come later. Before very long the hand will be opened to you, and then you will understand why so much attention has been given to fundamentals. Mastery of them leads to the knowledge possesssed by the world's most celebrated palmists. You will find yourself duplicating to a surprising degree their ability to interpret the meanings of the mysterious groupings of lines with which destiny has written its undeniable records within the hands of every one.

The thumb is the most significant of all the individual fundamental elements. It discloses with almost incredible accuracy its owner's temperament; whether he or she is hot or cool headed, affectionate or cold, extravagant or thrifty, kind or cruel, vacillating or methodical, weak-willed or strong, foresighted or ruled by impulse.

There Are Some Songs

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THERE are some songs that search the heart,
The mists of memory explore,
And though we dwell a world apart,
And though we meant to meet no more,
I see you standing at the door,
I feel your presence in the room,
As one white star breaks through the gloom
When day is o'er.

There are some songs that someone wrote,
Who knew it not, for you and me,
For I have heard one perfect note,
Half agony, half ecstasy,
And then your face again I see,
Your voice I hear from long ago,
The well-remembered, though I know
It cannot be.

There are some songs not born of men,
Whatever name they seem to bear,
Songs written with an angel's pen
Sweeter than men would ever dare:
Some angel touched some poet's hair,
Taught some musician more than art—
There are some songs that search the heart,
And find you there.

Uncle Phil Says:

That Is Perfection

Perfection does not consist in doing singular things; but it does consist in doing common things singularly well.

A man who knows that his hardships made the best part of his character may not want his son to have hardships.

Always be sure your friends can grant the favor before you ask it; then there won't be the pain and embarrassment of refusal.

Admitting our faults is half way to correcting them; but the laziest half.

Those That Tried

Failures are facts that prove a man has at least actually tried to be successful.

If you want to make your friend happy instead of seeking to have him make you happy, that's the true gold.

The sophisticated person finds little to enjoy. Everything is old to him.

We always feel great admiration for those clever people who can mend something when we break it.

Everyone remembers what a great man says. So much the worse for his reputation for consistency.

LET OCEAN BEACH BE HEARD ON COUNCIL PROBLEM

Next Tuesday evening at Ocean Beach school auditorium, in the social civic forum, discussion will be had and recommendations probably made, regarding the nomination and election of a city councilman from the first district.

The Ocean Beach and Point Loma area is vitally interested in the selection of a good man for this office; one who is efficient and honest; energetic and industrious; who can fill the position with honor and credit to his constituents. While this section has the largest number of voters to date it has never had representation from this immediate territory. If we had had a local man in office the past years, this vicinity would have benefitted immensely and received the needed projects which have been delayed from time to time with hundreds of hours of wasted energy on the part of local civic groups and their representatives, in trips to the office of city manager and city council sessions. If we again, turn this office over to a person who lives ten miles distant, we can expect to fare just as we have in the past, for lack of protection and clean-up at our beaches, as well as lack of cooperation when any beneficial project comes before those in charge at the city hall.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL, 155 YEARS AGO

Next Sunday is Universal Bible Sunday, celebrating annually by more people as a nation, giving devout reverence for the Great Book. The American Bible society has mailed out a brochure to be used for the occasion to over 115,000 preachers and superintendents of Sunday schools, on the theme, "The Bible in a Time of Confusion." Who cannot remember as they look back on childhood days and recall interesting days when attending Sunday School? Most of its influences are still felt in almost every life. For instance, a Mr. Henry of St. Louis has not missed attending Sunday School in over 52 years, and has certificates from schools in eleven states. He recently celebrated his 80th birthday.

The Sunday School movement has grown from the study of the Bible. Since it was first organized back in England over 155 years ago, its influence has ever been at work. Robert Raiker is responsible for that first Sunday School with 12 pupils. It grew; ten years later in United States at Philadelphia. The American Sunday School Union was organized in 1824, and in 1875 it became international, uniting with Canada and England in publication and uniform lessons. It was an experiment in sociology with Raiker but it was a blessing to the world. On Sunday the children who had toiled through the week were turned loose on the street. Raiker had a heart and went after the neglected youngsters. The movement soon spread all over England, and in all these years it has become a mighty growing force for training moral character.

Today the membership is over 38 million, including officers and teachers and its great army of scholars. Twenty millions scholars are in United States, taught by two million teachers, and who never get any reward except the glory for service and holding up righteousness before the millions they teach. It might not be exaggeration to say that these teachers are more powerful peacemakers than armies. One of the best recommends today of a child or adult is that they are a member of some Sunday School. President Roosevelt, who himself was once a teacher of a class says, "I am one who strongly believes that the Sunday School teacher has helped to share American character."

The Bible is still the best seller. over half a million copies sold the past year, and now the motion picture is to become the coming evangelist of the world. A Hollywood minister, retired and in his 87th year, has just completed a scenario for a Bible picture, filming of the entire Holy Scripture.

That great poet, W. R. Wallace, has penned these lines:

They say that man is mighty, he governs land and sea.
He wields a mighty scepter over lesser powers than he;
But mightier power and stronger
Man from his throne has hurled,
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.

Along with these lines, it is well to admit that the mother's heart is the child's schoolroom. Character, the greatest contribution of any child, is but the incarnation of personality of divinely approved virtues, motives and ideas; it has thus helped to make a better world to live in. It is sometimes hard to do justice to those who labor so quietly, unselfishly and unobtrusively; yet in the creation of our civliization, it is the men and women who have labored together faithfully, persistently and self-sacrificingly, who have played their greater part in making a right kind of civilization

The school room is giving greater and more detailed attention to the pupil; this is evident every day. Educators have learned that brevity counts in the school room, and educational facts must be made brief as possible with the greatest detail. Shakespeare says: "Brevity is the soul of wit," and it applies to the school room. Boards of education admit that schools should teach by stressing clear, analytical thinking and also encouraging the selecting of a solution based strictly on facts and free from prejudice. The realization of the people's best aspirations may be attended by unfavorable and untoward conditions. The crisis in the student's life may be the solution for their best needs and desires. Schools of United States employ more than a million teachers, and the value of all school property is in excess of 12 billion dollars. Who would say that we are shy on higher education?

A famous doctor recommends eating fricasseed crow. Well dressed and served hot from the frying pan, with delicious sauce. In his fidelity to the bird, he adds that he would rather have crow than squab or wild duck. He says that the eating habits of the crow are vastly cleaner than that of chickens and other domestic fowls. He is also convinced that it will be a delectable serving by choice

Thanksgiving Day

NO DOUBT the same old question will be asked that we have so often heafd — what have we to be thankful for? The question is foolish, almost as foolish as the attempts to answer it. Thanksgiving means gratitude, and there is probably no man alive who does not hold ingratitude to be one of the blackest sins. Of course, there can be no gratitude except as it is shown not only for something but to some one. Therefore, observes a writer in the Indianapolis News, it is that the thought of Thanksgiving necessarily implies the existence of a Divine Giver and Benefactor. So we are bidden to return thanks to Almighty God as "the Giver of every good and perfect gift." When there seems to be a scarcity of gifts one is tempted to ask the question, why be thankful? And that is a question which every one must answer for himself, and it will be answered as it always has been, in different ways. It is futile to catalogue what we know to be blessings and what we believe to be anything but blessings, and set off one list against the other, and be thankful in proport[illegible] the good exceeds th[illegible]

Lutheran Mission

The second in a series of advent sermons on "The Surpassing Chirst" will be the Sunday morning meditation at the Kunz Lutheran Memorial chapel, entitled: "Jesus and the Angels," delivered by the Rev. Martin Lankow, at 10:45.

The Sunday school lessons, starting at 9:30, will also be in preparation for the oncoming Christmastide.

The Bible hour at 7:30 will consider advent topics.

Carlyle long ago showed us the folly of the bookkeeping method as applied to things spiritual. Probably most people get out of life about what they deserve and in proportion to what they put into it. It seems to be true that the most thankful people are those who have the least. On the other hand, those who are surfeited with good things take them as matters of course, as their due, and so calling for no gratitude. The question seems to be whether one has a thankful spirit, which surely is something to be greatly desired.

Without it, man is less than man. Even beasts are grateful. Practically, the question suggested by the day touches character. There is nothing mechanical or formal about it. One can not pump up thankfulness, and the setting apart of a day does not suggest that there should be such an attempt. The day is rather a recognition, less of a duty than of an opportunity which it would be or might be fatal to neglect. "Be ye thankful" is an apostolic command. It ought to be easy to obey. Those men are nearest the truth who feel that in this life nothing is due them, and that whatever they get is in a very true sense a gift, and one which may be far beyond their deserts. So we are called to keep another Thanksgiving day, which should bring an outpouring of not only thankful but kindly hearts. Appropriate to the day is Pope's well-known verse:

Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see;
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me.

Pupil of the Great Escoffier Suggests a Sweet Potato Dish

By Barbara B. Brooks

TOURAINE, one of the old provinces of France and a cradle of gastronomic delight, produced the greatest chef the world has ever known—the famous Escoffier. Maxine, a pupil of Escoffier and chief chef of a fashionable American restaurant, reveres the traditions of the master but has found in American foods the inspiration for some of his most successful dishes.

Maxine tells of the occasion when he was called from his kitchen to receive the congratulations of a member of a European royal house who was visiting this country. Only a Frenchman could have conceived such a delicious dish, he was told. He smiled as he acknowledged the praise, for the secret of the dish was the use of corn flakes, than which there is no more distinctly American food.

Maxine has a penchant for cereals as an aid in dressing up and adding to the nutritive value of various dishes, and below is a recipe he gives for Sweet Potato Balls.

Chef Maxine

Sweet Potato Balls

5 or 6 sweet potatoes (boiled)
½ cup crushed pineapple (drained)
1 tablespoon butter
6 marshmallows
1 cup corn flakes (rolled fine)
½ teaspoon salt

Boil, peel and mash sweet potatoes and add pineapple which has been well drained; butter and salt. Form into balls with a marshmallow in the center of each ball. Roll in corn flake crumbs; place in a greased baking dish and bake in a hot oven. Temperature 400 degrees. Time 15 to 20 minutes.

You will like this so well that I am sure you will want to try something else in the cereal line; so I am adding a recipe for Bran Date Bars which you will find particularly delicious.

Bran Date Bars

3 eggs
1½ cups brown sugar
¾ cup flour
¾ teaspoon baking powder
¾ cup all-bran
1 cup nut meats (chopped)
½ cup dates (cut fine)

Beat the eggs until light, add the sugar and beat well. Add the flour sifted with the baking powder. Add all-bran, nuts and dates. Spread the mixture in a layer one-half inch thick in a greased shallow pan. Bake in a moderate oven (375° F.) for about 20-30 minutes. Remove from the oven and while warm, cut into squares or bars. Roll the pieces in powdered sugar or serve as a pudding with whipped cream. Provides 24 bars— 1" x 3".

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

Boris de Kirkoff, Theosophical lecturer, will discuss "The World's Unrest: Is There A Way Out?" in a forum-lecture of that title next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Temple of Peace, Theosophical university, Point Loma.

Unrest in the world, thinks Zirkoff, is caused from the conflict of misapplied life-energies that direct the activities of the world. A possible way out of the turmoil that abounds among the peoples of the globe today is the earnest effort to acquaint one's self with the fundamental plan behind Nature's operations and identify one's self with the spiritual energies existing thruout the universe.

"Nature is ethical: moral in the most deeply spiritual sense," the lecturer declares. "Let races of men become ethical and the world's unrest will cease. Let them seek identity with energies that spring from compassionate hearts and we shall have a new order of Peace."

Questions and comments from the audience are invited at the conclusion of the forum lectures in the Temple of Peace.

Toys Subject of Psychology Talk

One of the most timely subjects of a series presented to the psychology study group of the PTA was conducted by Mrs. Helen Craw Tuesday afternoon when she spoke on toys for children.

Mrs. Craw approacht her subject from the standpoint of psychologists who recognize that play is the most important activity in which a child can engage. It develops his physical and mental coordination, it adjusts his emotional life, and it awakens his social consciousness.

In order to explain further the importance of play, the speaker traced briefly the evolution of man. The sum of man's activities and traits still exist in the "race consciousness' of the child; therefore, "it seems to be necessary, more or less, for children to repeat all the activities of early man." Some of these traits are undesirable in the civilized adult, but most of them are needed for a full development. The earliest appearing characteristics are those of climbing, balancing, pulling, throwing, running, jumping, biting, fighting, digging and building. Later gregariousness, with its attendant unselfishness and group loyalty, is manifested. This is illustrated by ballgames in which the individual sub ordinates his advantage to the group welfare. It is also evidenced in the reluctance of the "gang age" group to tattle.

Because of the importance of play the materials of the child's activities are of vital consideration. When the psychology of play is better understood, the parents will find themselves buying the simpler, more inexpensive toys, especially those which can be used outdoors. Mrs. Craw provided her audience with mimeographed sheets of play materials suitable for children from birth to the age of adolescence. These lists will be distributed at the next regular meeting of the P.-T.A. Wednesday afternoo .They will be extremely valuable to all parents who are planning to play "Santa Claus" and will prevent, among many others, the common mistake of buying Junior an electric train when he is in the stage of wanting to furnish his own automotive power to his toys.

There will be two more psychology classes in this series. Next Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. Mrs. Craw will discuss the "Symptons of Early Adolescense."

Hints for Motorists

By C. R. Strouse

Director, School of Automobiles, International Correspondence Schools

ON cars equipped with all-felt window channels, trouble is often experienced with the felt swelling up when wet, so that it is almost impossible to raise or lower the glass. Running an ordinary black marking crayon, such as used to label boxes, along the inside of the channels will permit the window to be moved easily, regardless of weather conditions.

When lubricating the chassis of an automobile equipped with four-wheel brakes, never fill the front hub caps with grease. Many greasy and grabbing front brakes have been caused by the presence of grease in the caps. The front wheels should be removed after every 5,000 miles of running, and the bearings washed thoroughly with gasoline. The bearings should then be re-covered with grease and replaced.

The Golden Text is from Isaiah: "I am the Lord that maketh all things; that stretcheth forth the heavens alone; that spreadeth abroad the earth by myself."

Among the Bible citations in the Lesson-Sermon are these words of the Psalmist: "O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever. Let the redeemed of the Lord say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy; . . . He sent his word, and healed them, and delivered them from their destructions. Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!"

Correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, state: "Immortal Mind is the only cause; therefore disease is neither a cause nor an effect . . . . To remove the error producing disorder, you must calm and instruct mortal mind with immortal Truth."

The Living Truth

WE DO not need to defend the truth. Truth is its own defense. Not many years ago merchants and bankers, when they left their places of business, turned off the lights and put up great heavy shutters. Today they pull aside the blinds and turn on a strong light. The greatest protection the truth of God can have is to expose it so that everyone may see what it does. Let us give up trying to guard our faith. It is better far to live it.

Sawdy pulled a moment at his mustache. "No hurry," he said reflectively. "It's early yet for him. If he's our man, he's got a pocketful of money to blow." He thought a minute further. "Look here, Scotch! Tell our boys over there at the bar to string out quiet and meet back of the barn. Watch your chance. Speak around to the hitch rack and get the sorrel down to the barn on an old feed-bill claim. I'll tackle Barney in the saloon and see what chance there is to gettin' him down there. Got a rope ready?"

"I have."

"Vamos!"

McAlpin joined the men at the bar. Sawdy slipped out the back door and, half a block down the alley, walked out into River street and down to the Red Front saloon.

But from the moment the big adventurer stepped out of the back door of one saloon and in at the front door of the other, a curious change took place. He had left Spotts' place sober—Sawdy was in fact a very moderate man. He strode into the Red Front reeling.

The bar was well filled. Sawdy saw at a glance that among the men lined up there were a number of town loafers who never drank except at somebody's expense. When Sawdy caught sight of Redstock with the loafers around him, inference was swift and correct. Barney had money.

The saloonkeeper, Harry Boland, foxy-eyed and alert at the head of the bar, saw Sawdy stagger in through the green baize; he watched the big fellow closely. Sawdy zigzagged back towards the loafers among whom Barney was holding forth.

Boland, a man of ripe experience in appraising all stages of intoxication, was suspicious, since Henry Sawdy was no drunk; Boland had never before seen him intoxicated. But Sawdy was an artist and did not make the mistake of the actor who plays the sober man trying to appear drunk. Sawdy was the drunken man trying to appear sober.

He greeted Barney gravely, then ordered drinks for everybody in Barney Rebstock's honor. Having lingered over the round, Sawdy cast his eye approvingly upon the thirsty cowd, passed the forefinger of his right hand thoughtfully under each wing of his mustache in turn, drew from a vest pocket a gold double eagle, and made a general proposal.

"I'll match any man here for twenty-dollar gold pieces." It was a fairly safe offer, because he well knew all the loafers put together could not raise twenty dollars. But he had an object in view.

Barney, after some shilly-shallying, accepted the challenge. He asked Boland to lend him a gold piece. When Boland produced a twenty-dollar coin and tossed it out to Barney, it did not take Sawdy long to figure out that Barney had money and that it was in the keeping of the saloonkeeper. Sawdy, notoriously lucky at matching, lost out after several trials; he quit forty dollars to the bad. But he had Barney greatly inflated by his triumph, with the whole room crowding eagerly around the contestants.

After a round of drinks at Barney's charge, Sawdy brought the talk around to a fine-looking sorrel outside at the hitch rack. Barney claimed it. Sawdy wanted to buy it. Barney demurred—it wasn't for sale.

Boland heard the talk. He drew Barney to the rear end of the bar. "Sell it to him, you fool," whispered Boland. "Don't you see he's drunk as a fiddler? You can get twice what the horse is worth."

Thus encouraged, Barney stepped out of doors with Sawdy, followed by a little circle of the curious.

The horse was gone. This fact caused no great excitement; Sawdy suggested he had got loose and strayed up or down the street and that they take a look around to find him. The curiosity of the crowd weakened, and they re-entered the saloon, hoping for another chance to get a drink. Sawdy and Barney walked down the street together, wrangling as they went over the mischance and the merits of the missing horse. As the pair passed McAlpin's barn it occurred to Sawdy they had better look in and ask for information.

CHAPTER X

A hanging lantern lighted the barn gangway dimly. Sawdy's call for a hostler was answered by McAlpin himself, who, lantern in hand, ambled in his peculiar gait briskly forward.

"Hello, Mac," exclaimed Sawdy, waving like a tall tree in a number four breeze. "We're looking for Barney's horse," he continued gruffy—"got loose up the street just now—seen anythin' of a stray?"

McAlpin, raising his lantern looked at Rebstock. "Why, yes, I seen a stray," he admited sulkily.

"Was it a sorrel?" asked Sawdy with some hope.

"It was a sorrel, Sawdy; saddled and bridled. What about it?"

"It's probably Barney's horse. Let's see it. Where is it?"

McAlpin jerked his head back over his shoulder. "In the box stall. Your horse, Barney?"

"Sure, it's my horse."

"Right this way, Barney," returned McAlpin. "Put out your cigars, boys, and come along with me," he added, lantern in hand. He scuttled down the gangway, Rebstock and Sawdy after him, stopped at the stall box, hung his lantern on a high gangway hook, unlatched the stall door, and pointed within. "There's your horse, Barney. Maybe I better give him a bit of oats before you go. . . . No? Water then?"

Rebstock and Sawdy had stepped into the stall with McAlpin. The liveryman led the horse out. Rebstock started to follow; Sawdy laid a hand on his shoulder. "Just a minute. I want to talk to you, Barney. We'll join you in a minute, Mac. Get out the black bottle. But leave the lantern."

"What's up?" asked Rebstock, eyeing Sawdy closely, and always suspicious.

Sawdy was standing backed against one side of the box stall. "Barney," he said in confidential fashion, "I'd like to have just a little horse-to-horse talk with you."

"What d'you mean, horse-to-horse talk?" snapped Barney.

"Just this: Do you feel just exactly right, leavin' your money with Harry Boland?"

"What do you mean?"

"Do you feel safe? I ask you as man to man, Barney, and an old friend, do you feel safe, leaving a roll with Boland?"

Barney fumbled mentally. "Why shouldn't I?" he countered bluntly.

"I'd hate to see you, after this trouble you've had, lose your money with Harry Boland," persisted the cowman. "I'll tell you honest—and you can tell the critter himself if you like—I wouldn't never leave five hundred of my money with Harry Boland."

"Never had it to leave, did you?"

"Well, no foolin', Barney, wouldn't do it. So that's what I say, as man to man—keep your money in the bank, not in a dive. Have you got a receipt for your money?"

"No."

"How much money are you leavin' with him?"

"None of your damned business, that's how much. I'm headin' up the street. Get out of the way."

"Don't get sore, Barney. I'm meanin' the best for you. Just wait a minute an' I'll walk up the street with you—gettin' kind of thirsty myself. Did you hear, Barney, about Bill Denison's place gettin' burned down?"

He Could See Rebstock's Eyes Flashing Green.

"I heard about a fire out that way—what about it?" demanded Rebstock.

"Why, nothin'—nothin' at all. But, Barney, this is why I wanted to talk to you: There's folks here in town that don't know you as well as I do, are mean enough to say you know a lot more about that fire than you want to tell. I claim they're wrong—what'll I tell 'em?"

"Tell 'em to go to hell."

"Suppose they won't do it, Barney?" asked Sawdy calmly.

Rebstock shuffled angrily. "Look here, Sawdy. You can't bunk me any more. If they don't want to go to hell, you go for 'em."

With this suggestion, Rebstock started again for the stall door. Sawdy's hand came down a bit heavier on Barney's shoulder. The slippery fellow tried to jerk away when Sawdy's fingers sank deep into the coat and shirt of his victim. "Barney," he protested solemnly, "I don't like to see an old friendship broken up by thoughtless words."

"A hell of a friendship," snorted Rebstock.

"Barney, I want to be friends with you. What's the facts about that fire?"

With a volley of oaths, Rebstock tore loose from Sawdy's grasp, backed hurriedly away, and tried to spring over the side wall. Sawdy was too quick. He jumped to him, caught him by the arm, and slammed him halfway across the stall. Barney landed on his hands and knees, sprang to his feet, and faced his old-time acquaintance with wicked eyes. In the dim light of the lantern, high in the gangway, Sawdy caught the flash of the blade of a knife—lying, Mexican fashion, in Barney's right hand.

Both were quick. Rebstock, smaller and lighter, could strike and spring like a wildcat, but he faced a foe who, though larger and heavier, was esteemed among his fellows as one hard to corner. Sawdy held the door side of the stall with his back to the light. He could see Rebstock's eyes flashing green. Rebstock wanted to get close enough to Sawdy to cut him and jump through the door; but he feared the terrific grip of the cowman's fingers on his wrists before he should get the knife into play.

Sawdy carried his gun—Rebstock had left his own with Boland—but he disdained to use it on a partly unarmed man. It was no part of his program to get himself embroiled with the law by shooting the criminal; what he and his cronies wanted from Rebstock was information.

It took only an instant for Sawdy to perceive that he could not safely hold his stand in front of the stall door. The lantern light was too uncertain—he could not follow Rebstock's eyes—part of the time he could hardly follow his jumpy steps.

In a moment, both men, one big, the other small, were jumping about the stall like boxers stripped for the ring. But Sawdy, though big, was the fastest on his feet among the cowmen that rode the Gunlock ranges. He had little alcohol aboard, was naturally as quick as a flash, and knew he was facing the most dangerous man with a knife along the Spanish Sinks. Ten youthful years spent among Mexican bandits, together with a lean and jumpy physical make-up, had given Barney Rebstock the name of a mean man with a knife, and Sawdy had no intention of adding to the outlaw's reputation as a killer, if he could help it.

The fight was in the lap of the gods. A misstep or a foot slip might end it any second. Sawdy was hoping his comrades secreted out in the corral would hear the scuffle and come in. But he was just stubborn enough not to call for help.

Barney, enraged at his plight, was breathing hard, and wind was too precious to waste in words. This silent struggle for the one slight advantage that would end the fight went on to the music of jerky breaths and nimble footing. It was soon a question as to whose wind would give out first—Sawdy, heavier, was at a disadvantage in endurance. While they feinted and jumped about, his foot slipped.

Barney saw the opening. He lunged forward. Sawdy instinctively whirled sidewise and threw up his knee to save his stomach. The savage thrust of Barney's knife caught the calf of his leg. As the cowman went down, his fingers gripped Barney's wrist. With a mere twist of the deadly grip learned long ago in Panhandle knife fights, he snapped like matches the two bones of Barney's forearm.

The wiry outlaw screamed. He was through; the rear gangway doors were flung open, and the confederates came running in from the corral.

From the darkness of the box stall came only the swish of hard breathing and the oaths and cries of Barney. Lefever grasped the bail of the lantern and threw the light rays within.

"Henry!" he yelled in alarm. "What's a-matter, pard? What's wrong?" He unlatched the gate of the stall as he called and hastened inside with Scott and Page at his heels. McAlpin ran down from the office. It was a moment before Lefever could make out just what was happening on the floor, as Barney, half choked, writhed under the remorseless grip that closed his windpipe. Sawdy, spread out on his stomach, lay, a huge bulk, with one arm over his antagonist. Only his heavy breathing indicated life. "Henry!" exclaimed Lefever. "What the hell's happened?"

"Nothing's happened yet, John. Look at my leg. Where's his knife?"

"God a'mighty! It's in your leg, Henry."

Lefever started to draw it out. "Hold on, John! Don't touch that till you get a tourniquet on. Who's here?" His heavy bloodshot eyes turned on Scott. "Bob! Look-see whether he's slit an artery or a vein. Hold the lantern there, John."

Scott found blood spurting from the wound. He fashioned a tourniquet from a thong of rawhide.

"Get up and get Carpy, quick!" muttered McAlpin to Page. "What you moonin' about? Henry is bad cut. Run, Ben!"

"All right. You hold Barney," growled Page, turning over his writhing prisoner.

Turning to the prostrate cowman while Scott twisted the tourniquet, McAlpin, gripping Rebstock, gave orders to Sawdy; the liveryman always took the stage. "Henry!" he shouted, in his excitement. "Lay right where you are. Don't stir till Carpy comes. Why didn't you call for help?" he thundered at Sawdy.

"Ain't never learned how yet," retorted the wounded man majestically.

Carpy reached the box stall ten minutes later.

The doctor held up the lantern. "Hell's bells!" he exclaimed to McAlpin and the hostler. "Don't leave the man lying in this dirt. Henry,"—he knelt at Sawdy's head—"what have they been doing? Who stuck you?"

"Doc," declared the notorious bachelor, "you might say I stuck myself. Sew me up and send the bill to my father-in-law after I get married, will you?"

On to Success—

With It Comes Boldness in New Ideas; Our Sphere of Friends and Activities Expands

A POOR salesman may be a genius at gardening; an indifferent stenographer sometimes never suspects her own gift for cookery, for dress design, for ability to pick up foreign languages. By thinking candidly about yourself, by being as friendly to yourself as you would be to another, you can often draw up a picture of your tastes, abilities, desires and hopes which will astonish you.

Take an inventory of yourself, paying special attention to the things you like but which you have little of in your daily life. Then start putting them into it.

From Interest to a Specialty

Often we have to begin slowly—reading, or finding courses of instruction within our means, or working out a program for ourselves in solitude; but every day something can be done toward the new way of living. It can grow from an interest into a hobby, from a hobby into a side line, from a side line into a specialty. Then comes the day when the unsatisfactory work can be given up (to someone who will find it as satisfying and as absorbing as we find our own new field) and success is at last really and noticeably on its way to us—or we are on our way to it.

Vitalizes Character

Then living begins to be fun. We meet people with the same tastes, not just the chance acquaintances who come our way in an uncongenial profession. Having succeeded once, we begin to show a little daring; we try new ideas more boldly, and our world of friends and activities expands even more. Chances we couldn't even imagine until we got inside our real work turn up on every hand. Best of all, even a small success has a vitalizing effect on character.

That is the most interesting discovery that success brings in its train: those who are living successfully make the best friends. They are free from malice and spitefulness. They are not petty. They are full of good talk and humor.—Dorothea Brande in Cosmopolitan.

Foreign Words and Phrases

Ab uno disce omnes. (L.) From one learn all; from a single case infer the whole.

Blague. (F.) Boastful talk; an incredible story.

Damnum absque injuria. (L.) Loss without legal injury.

Enfonts perdus. (F.) A forlorn hope.

Forsan et haec olim meminisse juvabit. (L.) Perhaps sometime it will be pleasant to remember even these things.

Quot homines, tot sententiae. (L.) Opinions as many as the men.

Inevitable

A LITTLE bit o' sorrow,
An' a li'le bit o' song,
Today an' then tomorrow,
As the old world bumps along;
A little bit o' kickin'
Over things misunderstood.
Somebody gets a lickin'—
But it won't do any good.

Even back in Eden's gladness
Were songs and sorrows mixed
Life is always bringin' sadness,
An' we try to have it fixed.
But we may as well look pleasant,
For each day we must agree
That the way it is at present
Is the way it's got to be.
—P. Johnson in Washington Star.

Before the 'Chute Opens

Those who jump say that falling through the air before opening a parachute is not at all like what one would imagine. Capt. Harry Armstrong of the physiological research division of the army air corps, took a jump just to see how the human body was affected.

He felt no rushing air, could breath and see perfectly, and was conscious of no sensation of falling until he got near enough the ground to see it rushing toward him. He felt the pressure of the air through which he was passing but said the sensation was similar to that of sinking into a very soft feather bed. Dropping 1,000 feet before opening his 'chute Captain Armstrong detected no change in his heart beat or breathing.—Pathfinder Magazine.

California Government Over Million A Day

San Diego county local governments had a total income of $13,345,090, or $50.91 per capita in 1934-35, according to findings of California Taxpayers' association. The local governments include the county, the cities, the schools, and other districts. Compared with other California counties, San Diego's local governments income per capita was 31st from the highest. The average for the State as a whole was $57.47.

Income in the county from local taxes levied by the county, cities, and schools was $7,987,285, or $30.47 per capita; other districts collected $465,013, or $1.77 per capita; apportionments from the state amounted to $3,760,850, or $14.35 per capita, while miscellaneous local income amounted to $1,131,942, or $4.32 per capita, the association stated.

The income of all the local governments of California, including the fifty-eight counties, the cities, schools, and other districts amounted to $365,969,000 in 1934-35, more than a million dollars a day, the Taxpayers' association found. This million dollars a day is the price the people of California pay for the services and regulations known as a local government, and does not include the equally varied and costly functions carried on by the state and federal governments.

Thomas A. Edison

The San Diego Consolidated Gas & Electric Company is pleased to resume the series of live talent radio programs depicting the dramatic incidents in the life of "America's Miracle Man, Thomas A. Edison."

This program was originally planned for three months but developed such interest that it ran weekly for a full year, when it was discontinued.

However, so many inquiries and requests have since come from individuals and groups who found these historic dramas of special interest, that the series will be resumed beginning Sunday evening at 8:30 over Radio Station KGB.

May we remind those who listen-in that this program is neither a nation-wide broadcast nor a transcription, but an actual live-talent program written by and produced with local talent.

During the year's run 36 voices in 170 character parts presented the more dramatic incidents of Edison's life up to his middle thirties. Some of these programs were recorded and sent to members of Edison's family and word received of their deep appreciation of the fidelity with which the incidents were reproduced.

The renewal of the series will carry Edison's life through the greatest period of his accomplishment for the electrical industry and humanity. The programs again will be written and produced by local talent. It is our hope that you continue to enjoy these programs and perhaps gain an added thrill in knowing they are presented entirely through San Diego talent.
